Internal Revenue Service News

Do you have a son or daughter working during the summer vacation, who is likely to earn more than $600 before school starts again?

If so, he or she doesn't have to quit work before earning that amount for you to retain your child exemption deduction. The same holds true if you have a non-student working child who will still be under 19 by the end of the tax year.

In either case, regardless of how much the child earns, the parent may claim an exemption, providing he has furnished over half the total cost of his child's support for the year.
This rule also applies in the case of legally adopted children.

There is one important thing to keep in mind: A dependen t child is also entitled to an exemption deduction for himself on his own separate reutrn. On the other hand if he is married, and files a joint return with his wife, no dependency exemption may be claimed by the parent.

A. P. Andrews, Internal Revenue clarified revenue laws which have confused many parents in Cameron.

We have reports of both par-H ents and employers telling working children they'll have to quit their jobs before they earn $600. They can work right up to the reopening of school if they want to," A. P. Andrews said. "The children, however, may have to pay a small tax. Since many of them are studying our own courses in basic taxation they already know this. By the same token, many of them who work only short terms of employment or for a smaller salary will probably be entitled to refunds during the next filing season."

This information should prove helpful to three parties to summer employment, the student or child worker, the parents, and the employer, A. P. Andrews said. He warned that to gain advantage of this rule, children over 19 must be bona fide students at recognized educational institutions, or pursuing a full time farm training course.

Cotton Growers Urged to Demand 10 Percent Reserve

Officers of the Old Cotton Belt Association of Texas this week urged all growers in the area to put up a united front in order to retain the 10 percent reserve, as is specified in the present law.

All farmer-members were requested to contact their senators and congressmen and asked them to retain the present law.

"The OCBA officers and directors feel that this is the only medium to regain the acreage lost in 1954 the organization said.

The officers and executive committee will meet with the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee at College Station on Sept. 7 to discuss the matter.

The Old Cotton Belt Association now has members in 46 counties. have agricultural sub-committees from both the U. S. Senate and House Of Representatives to come to the area some time in September or October and discuss the acreage problem with various farmers.

Glenn Abercrombie Guest Speaker at Kiwanis Meeting

Glenn Abercrombie, operator and co-owner of the new Milam county radio station KMIL was guest speaker at the Kiwanis Club at their regular meeting Thursday noon at the Milam Coffee Shop.

He spoke at length of the trouble the station had in getting a frequency assigned to them, explaining that Cameron was the only locality feasible for the station, since five miles in any direction would cause interference with other radios stations.

Abercrombie pointed out that the station will be entirely modernistic in every respect, with all new equipment. He added they hope to start broadcasting between the dates of Sept. 15 and 20.

During the business session Dr. Charles Howard, Jr. related that Cameron seem eager to join forces and build a Community Center at a suitable location in the city. The project is still in its primary stages, with committees not yet appointed to complete details.

Robert Nelson will be the program chairman at the next regular meeting of the Kiwanis.

Dr. George T. McMahan, manager of the Veterans Administration Center in Waco, has received information that homes not affected by FHA credit controls also may be eligible for 30 year, no down payment GI loans providing VA receives appraisal requests on or before Sept. 30, 1955.

Soil Conservation District News

Supervisors: Edwin Fischer, A. W. Butts, Paul C. Graves, Clarence L. Stock and Hal Hartrick.

John Burtis, a central Texas S. C. D. participant in the Corinth Community south of Buckholts, is a firm believer in winter peas as a cover crop to be grown and put back in the soil before cotton. John plants his peas in the fall and applies about 100 pounds of 45 percent phosphate to the acre at planting time. They were turned under the last week in March, then cotton was planted April 20. Burtis gave this treatment to about 20 acres this year. On fifteen acres joining this, cotton was planted at the same time and on the same kind of land, but it had received no conservation treatment. Cotton is being gathered on both of these areas now and the production is proving that conservation pays. The treated land is producing ¾ bale to the acre while the untreated is producing ¼ bale to the acre.

Seed of new varieties of spinach and onions, Early Hybrid 7 and Early Crystal 231, will be available in limited quantities for commercial plantings this fall. Both have advantages over varieties now commonly grown.

John said that this was once considered the poor farm. It is now a good producing upland farm. He thinks a good over drop program is the key to his conervation plans, but he also does not de emphasize toehr conservation practices such as terraces, waterways, stubble management, and other conservation practices.

The grade of mechanically harvested cotton can be raised or low ered by the practices used by the grower during the harvesting season. Don't take wet cotton to the gin. Don't tramp cotton on trailers; equip strippers with blow er attachments and get the latest available information from the lo cal county agent on defoliation are suggestions from Fred C. Elliott, extension cotton specialist.

The answer to the problem of too many eggs in one season and too few in the fall and winter months when prices are usually best may be in the two flock system of egg production. Now is the time to start the fall flock chicks.

Gving the dairy cow an opportunity to produce at her best is defined by Extension Service dairy specialists as cow care. Ask your local county agent for a copy of L-247, Cow Care.

Long hours of hard work are common place with farm families during the harvest season and is a period of increasing numbers of farm and home accidents. Fatigue, says the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Committee, is a contributing cause to this increase. "Be more careful and don't take chances which could lead to trouble for the time saved isn't worth the cost if an accident is the final result," warns the committee.

VA Administration Lists Controls On GI Home Loans

Veterans Administration today answered several questions concerning credit controls on GI home loans.

The credit control order of July 30, 1955, requiring a two percent down payment and limiting the maturity of such loans to 25 years was not retroactive, VA. stressed.

Exempted from credit controls are those new and existing homes for which VA received requests for appraisal prior to July 30.

The two percent cash down payment is not required on properties where the Certificate of Reasonable Value dated prior to July 30, expires and is extended; however, the veteran purchaser will be required to pay in cash the loan closing costs on such cases.

The new credit controls will not apply to GI home loans made solely for the replacement or reconstruction of residential property that has been destroyed or substantially damaged by flood, fire, or similar disasters.

The new requirements do not apply to repair, alterations or improvement loans.

VA said it could not grant exceptions where a veteran signed a contract prior to July 30, but no request for appraisal was received prior to that date.

The two percent down payment requirements must be met in every case by a payment of cash. An equity in land is not acceptable.

Urgent Appeal For Nurses for Polio Duty Announced

An urgent appeal for 32 registered nurses for polio duty in Boston, Mass., was made today by Miss Ann Magnussen, director of Nursing Services for the American Red Cross in Washington, D. C.

The request for Red Cross to recruit nurses was made by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. The 32 nurses now needed will serve at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, where many of the 1,464 polio cases reported in the state from Jan. 1 through Aug. 17, are being treated.

"It is not our intention to drain nurses from their own community or out of duty in which they are vitally needed," Miss Magnussen said. "However, there are many registered nurses not active in the profession, and perhaps some can arrange their personal affairs to serve during this period when death or serious crippling may be prevented."

Miss Magnussen said that the foundation will pay the cost of transportation to places of assignment and will provide maintenance in addition to salary while the nurse is serving in polio work

All nurses available for polio duty are requested to contact their local Red Cross chapter for full details.
